Poll: Compared To Pre-Pandemic, Dentists Reporting
Increase In Cracked Teeth, Other Conditions

Becker's Dental Review (10/19, Masson) said a new poll has found that "the majority of U.S. dentists are reporting four conditions on the rise compared to pre-pandemic levels." In the poll conducted during the week of Oct. 11 by the American Dental Association Health Policy Institute, 69.1% dentists said that the prevalence of bruxism among their patients has increased compared to before the COVID-19 pandemic. Most dentists also reported seeing increases in chipped teeth (63.3%), cracked teeth (62.9%), and temporomandibular joint dysfunction symptoms (59.8%).
